PROGRAM ON ETHICS

The Program on Ethics (previously known as the Program on Values in Society) is dedicated to research, teaching, and outreach on ethical issues that arise across the disciplines. The Program is committed to facilitating the multidisciplinary collaboration that is essential to finding practical and insightful responses to today's myriad moral problems. The members of the Core Faculty are currently working on a variety of issues, including global climate change; immigration and international justice; and medical practice and disability rights.

Contact the Program on Ethics

You can get involved with the Program on Ethics in a variety of ways. We host symposia and workshops throughout the year, all of them open to the public. We also offer a certificate program for graduate students, and a minor for undergraduate students. More details can be found on their respective pages listed below.

PROGRAM ON ETHICS OFFERINGS

- Undergraduate Ethics Minor
- Graduate Certificate in Ethics

CORE MEMBERS

- Gardiner, Stephen
  Director, Program on Ethics
  Professor of Philosophy and Ben Rabinowitz Endowed Professor of Human Dimensions of the Environment
- Blake, Michael
  Professor, Philosophy and Public Affairs
- Fourie, Carina
  Benjamin Rabinowitz Assistant Professor in Medical Ethics, Philosophy
- Goering, Sara
  Associate Professor, Philosophy

ASSOCIATE MEMBERS

- Campelia, Gina
  (medical ethics)
  Assistant Professor, Bioethics & Humanities
- Jecker, Nancy
  (bioethics)
  Professor, Bioethics & Humanities
- Marshall, Colin
  (metaethics; history of ethics; ethics of persuasion)
  Associate Professor, Philosophy
- Mayerfeld, Jamie
  (human rights; global justice)
  Professor, Law Societies and Justice, and Affiliate Faculty, Philosophy
- Talbott, William J.
  (human rights; global justice)
  Professor, Philosophy
- Turner, Jack
  (American political thought; critical race theory)
  Associate Professor, Political Science